Most people know that there are 70 million Baby Boomers in America today....but what is less known is that there are approximately 100 million people in America between the ages of 16 and 30. This generation has just entered, or will soon be entering the work force. And they have no idea how to invest, save, or handle their money. Young people today come out of school having had little or no formal education on the basics of money management. Many have large debts from student loans looming over their heads. And many feel confused and powerless when their pricey educations don't translate into high paying jobs. They feel that their $30,000-$40,000 salary is too meager to bother with investing, and they constantly fear that there will be "too much month left at the end of their money." Douglas R. Andrew has shown the parents of this generation a different pathway to financial freedom. Now Doug and his sons, Emron and Aaron - both of whom are in their mid-20s - show the under-30 crowd how they can break from traditional 401k investment plans and instead can find a better way by investing in real estate, budgeting effectively, avoiding unnecessary taxes and using life insurance to create tax-free income. With the principles outlined in Millionaire by Thirty, recent graduates will be earning enough interest on their savings to meet their basic living expenses by the time they're 30. And by the time they're 35, their investments will be earning more money than they are, guaranteeing them a happy, wealthy future.

This guide provides practical pointers for police in determining whether a child's injuries are accidental or intentional. Police should begin their investigation by asking the caretaker for an explanation of the child's bruises or injuries. All bruises must be investigated. If bruises are found on two or more planes of a child's body, investigators should be suspicious. A physical examination of the suspected child victim must be conducted and the data clearly and accurately recorded. Laboratory data should be obtained to support or refute the evidence of abuse. If the reported history of an injury or injuries changes during the course of an investigation, or if there is conflict between two adult caretakers as to the cause of injury, the likelihood of child maltreatment increases. The demeanor of the child's parents or caretakers should be carefully observed. This booklet outlines key points in the areas of repetitive accidents, skin injuries, and bruises. The latter discussion focuses on the age dating of bruises, bruise configurations, and natural or normal bruising. Guidelines are also provided for investigating the following types of injuries: burns, poisoning, head injuries, eye injuries, and internal injuries. Also discussed are criteria for distinguishing sudden infant death syndrome from fatal child abuse and other medical conditions. 23 supplemental readings and a list of 23 organizational resources.
