The Mysterious Affair at Styles is a detective novel by British writer Agatha Christie. It was written in the middle of the First World War, in 1916, and first published by John Lane in the United States in October 1920 and in the United Kingdom by The Bodley Head (John Lane's UK company) on 21 January 1921.*

The Mysterious Affair at Styles - Wikipedia

The Mysterious Affair at Styles is still a very enjoyable film that is a nice addition to the episodes even if it clunks a little bit against the flow. The essence is still there even if it must be said the longer running time and the change in the dynamics does rather reduce the fresh humor of the episodes and how accessible they were.

The Mysterious Affair at Styles was the very first Agatha Christie novel to be published and arose from a challenge set by her sister, Madge, to write a "good detective story". At the time Christie was working in the dispensary of a local hospital and, as such, had a professional knowledge of poisons that was to pay dividends in both her first accepted manuscript and many of her future novels.

The Mysterious Affair at Styles was number six in that line, carrying green bands to mark it out as crime fiction (as opposed to orange for general fiction, dark blue for biographies, etc.). The only other mystery among those initial 10 was Dorothy L. Sayers' The Unpleasantness at the Bellona Club (1928).
